WORDS I WISH I'D WRITTEN

"We hear a great deal these days about the necessity of religion to be relevant. But a religion totally relevant to any particular moment in history, totally relevant to any particular culture, is in my judgement, a perverted religion. Perhaps religion renders its greatest service when it seeks not relevance but perspective, a perspective that transcends the social, political and economic viewpoints that determine life styles." Rev. Daniel Higgins, Lubbock Texas via News and Notes of Frank Faux Memphis, Tenn.

Perhaps together we can get perspective. The Membership Book is available for those who wish to join with us Easter.

HIBERNATION'S OVER

The tempo quickens. We've things to think about and do. There's a building to start financial matters to ponder - folks to see - attendance back to normal - and...
