On Greeting the Minister after Church

Usually talkative Unitarians are often tongue-tied when they speak to the minister after the church service. If you wish to indicate your interest in the sermon, these opening sentences are suggested:

1. I enjoy that sermon every time I hear it.
2. I know how busy you've been with other things this week.
3. I hope there were no visitors here this morning.
4. I suppose that was a good sermon—I couldn't hear a word you said.
5. I can't remember what it was, but something you said was very profound.
6. That was most interesting; of course I know you don't really mean it.
7. I'm sorry that you're not feeling well.
8. I wish you wouldn't preach about religion.
9. As I've always said, preaching is not a minister's most important job.
—Christopher Raible

BUILDING

It's concrete. That is, the walls of the foundation are in, up, there! Begins to look for real now. Don't know how much more they will get going before winter stops them but even this much looks great

IF WINTER COMES

What's he mean IF? Remembering last winter when we had to call off church three or four times we state that if we do this year we will announce it over WDEA 9 a.m.

THIS SUNDAY (3rd)

We will have the pleasure of listening to our Japanese friend Mike Ikemia play.

BOARD MEETING

Monday December 4th at the Gibbises 7: 30

NEED A RIDE

To church or Discussion Group? Please let someone know. Call someone near you and ask if they are going. If they aren't they will pass the word along. Don't be bashful.

MABEL LORD

Is in the hospital. She slipped and fell. We missed the pleasure of singing to her on her 92nd birthday. This will let her know we were thinking of her.

G. F. HAN

It's that time again. The CAROL SING. Assemble at the Gibbises at 7 p.m. Bring flashlights. Everybody invited. Cocoa or something afterwards.

Neither rain nor snow nor gloom of night will stop these swift couriers (except zero weather). We used the phone to reach our friends with song last year! Oh, well. That's December 21st.

DISCUSSION GROUP: Projected New Year's Party at Bromley's (check it)
